ASTM C1074. Significance and Use. This practice can be used to estimate the in-place strength of concrete to allow the start of critical construction activities such as: (1) removal of formwork and reshoring; (2) post-tensioning of tendons; (3) termination of cold weather protection; and (4) opening of roadways to traffic. This practice can be used to estimate strength of laboratory specimens cured under non-standard temperature conditions.

C 1074 - 04 concrete will experience while hardening (5, 7). For Type I cement without admixtures and a curing temperature range from 0 to 40 °C, the recommended datum temperature is 0 °C (5). For other conditions and when maximum accuracy of strength estimation is desired, the appropriate datum temperature can be determined experimentally according to the procedures in Annex A1.

ASTM C1074, 2019 Edition, June 1, 2019 - Standard Practice for Estimating Concrete Strength by the Maturity Method. This practice provides a procedure for estimating concrete strength by means of the maturity method. The maturity index is expressed either in terms of the temperature-time factor or in terms of the equivalent age at a specified temperature.

maturity method [ASTM C 1074]. In the mid to late 1990s, the Federal Highway Administration undertook efforts to publicize products resulting from the Strategic Highway Research Program (SHRP). While there was no new research on the maturity method, SHRP Project C-204 recommended this method as an Maturity Concrete maturity testing is a solution for the construction industry to help assess the compressive strength of the concrete as described in ASTM C1074. The testing can aid in decisions regarding concrete curing conditions and mix design.

ASTM C1074-19 Standard Practice for Estimating Concrete Strength by the Maturity Method 1.1 This practice provides a procedure for estimating concrete strength by means of the maturity method. The maturity index is expressed either in terms of the temperature-time factor or in terms of the equivalent age at a specified temperature.

ASTM C1074-19 - Standard Practice for Estimating Concrete ...

ASTM C 1074 provides a procedure to determine the activation energy or alternatively suggests that a value of 40,000 to 45,000 J/mol is a reasonable assumption for concrete with a Type I cement. Using the established maturity function, the actual age and measured temperature is converted to an equivalent age to predict the concrete strength.
