The Drinker (German: Der Trinker) is a novel by German writer Hans Fallada, first published posthumously in 1950. Fallada began the novel in 1944, when he was imprisoned in a criminal asylum for the attempted murder of his wife. It is autobiographical, in diary form, and tells the story of a man in the grip of alcohol.

Fallada outlasted the Reich and was freed at war's end. But he was a shattered man. To help him recover by putting him to work, Fallada's publisher gave him the Gestapo file of a simple, working-class couple who had resisted the Nazis. Inspired, Fallada completed Every Man Dies Alone in just twenty-four days.

HANS FALLADA was the pen name of German author Rudolf Ditzen, whose books were bestsellers in the US and UK prior to World War II and were even made into Hollywood movies. But during the war he refused to join the Nazi Party, and found himself cast into a Nazi insane asylum.

When Discipline Was the Therapy: Hans Fallada's The Drinker

So, it is somewhat disorienting perhaps to read the German writer Hans Fallada's (1893-1947) novel The Drinker, first published in 1947, with a new edition appearing in English a couple of years ago. Written in a very different time and place from our own-during the final months of Nazi Germany-the book reveals some of the now forgotten aspects of alcohol consumption and treatment.

The Drinker by Hans Fallada - Goodreads

Hans Fallada was a German writer of the first half of the 20th century. Some of his better known novels include Little Man, What Now? and Every Man Dies Alone. His works belong predominantly to the New Objectivity literary style, a style associated with an emotionless reportage approach, with precision of detail, and a veneration for 'the fact'. Fallada's pseudonym derives from a combination of characters found in the Grimm's Fairy Tales: The titular protagonist of Hans in Luck, and Falada the m
